What does your child do when s/he gets out early from school? Did you know the Youth Sports Alliance has after-school programs on early release days geared just for 6th through 9th graders?

ACTIV8 is a unique (and growing) community collaboration that includes numerous non-profits, businesses and schools to provide programs specifically for the teen/tweens. YSA holds annual focus groups with middle school and junior high students to identify activities that will interest this age-group including later-entry sports such as rowing or curling, as well as healthy lifestyle activities like cooking and theatre. The programs offered are supervised and many of the activities take place right on campus. ACTIV8 classes are smaller than YSA's Get Out & Play program, with class sizes ranging from 8 for photography to 24 for biathlon. Multiple activities are offered each month with students having the option to choose one.

ACTIV8 focuses on developing eight lifestyle qualities: Accountability, Confidence, Equality, Inspiration, Kindness, Leadership, Respect, and Versatility. Students are given a "community passport" after their first session and are responsible for obtaining signatures from instructors after each activity. Upon completing eight activities (one of which must include CPR), students receive a Park City ACTIV8 Award. The CPR requirement (Accountability) allows students to earn money as babysitters or from other organizations around town.

YSA offers scholarships to those students who are eligible for free and reduced lunch programs at school or for those families in financial need. (Some programs have a limited number of scholarships. Please apply early.)
